

Whether tossing around a football or a round ball, the Pittsburgh Steelers proved they have talent Thursday night during a match against Hampton faculty.

Select members of the Steelers – including Ben Roethlisberger, Brett Keisel and Ryan Mundy – faced off against Hampton faculty during a special game to raise funds for the 2011 Senior Class.

During halftime, the audience had the opportunity to obtain autographs with the Steelers in attendance, who affectionately called themselves the “Footballers.”

Teammates on both sides of the court had fun but played hard, with a final score for the Steelers over the 100 mark.

Following the game, Mr. Roethlisberger spoke to local media about Hampton Township – the community in which he lives.

The Hampton Township School District would like to extend a thank you to everyone who participated in the game, and the fans and residents who came out to cheer both teams on.
